

Data Privacy - The new era of data protection

12th March 2019

Central London

£259.99 +VAT

This course, led by Mark Burnett, will reinforce the work you have already completed concerning data protection and compliance with the GDPR. It is designed to help charities understand privacy and risk and prepare them for the future. Upholding the highest standards when protecting data will help avoid reputational damage and sustain the organisation in the long term.

At the end of the day the attendee will be able to action a plan to measure and reduce risk, change procedures to ensure better governance, develop better data protection policies across the entire organisation, improve fund-raising, transparently share data in a lawful way, plan for a data breach and respond more effectively.

Covering:

- Future technology and how we should prepare for change
 - What can we learn from recent cases of breaches
- Guidance on formal agreements with data processors and controllers with whom you share data
- How your staff could be responsible for 92% of security failures and solutions to this problem
 - How to apply risk where 'high' risk processing is undertaken
 - Data breach prevention and response
